

Discontinuance of the Lock Collector

Dear All,

Reluctantly I have now decided that this issue has to be the last Lock Collector. When starting in 2003, I never expected to continue writing for so long. What I wanted to do then was research information about the early lockmakers, and it seemed sensible to compile what I found into what became regular newsletters, to benefit fellow collectors.

That ten years of study and the long production run of this magazine, has now exhausted what is available for me to satisfactorily provide in the future - more particularly in a form of and sufficient quality of content.

So, while most subscribers are due to renew after this issue, added to the problem of finding sufficient quality of material, the time is now appropriate to discontinue.

For those who have paid beyond this current issue, having just made this final decision it will take me some time to ascertain what individual refunds are due, and to make repayment.

It is with regret this has to be, however it has been an enjoyable experience, to research and provide the information contained in all the past issues of my Lock Collector - my very grateful thanks are due to all those who have helped.

Tony.
